From the President's Desk:

By Mary Lou Ambrose

Mostly I write here about the terrifying action and inaction of the Former Guy and his group of crazies. But I decided that this month I would concentrate on the talent we have in the Democratic party. This is a difficult time in American politics, in fact, in American History. Until recently there were no Democratic candidates to talk about. Things are now starting to change.

We are seeing good Democrats stepping up. More will follow. I decided to use this column to go over with you the people who have declared their candidacies. My reason for this is to encourage those of you who really want to help make a difference in these dangerous times, but do not know how to get started. The best way to "get involved" is to sign on with a candidate or an issue you like. One you believe can make a difference in this crazy political world. Then you work hard.

On the National side, many were delighted to hear that Val Demings had decided to run against Marco Rubio. I have been personally excited to see this. Years ago, when she came to the Largo Club to speak, I had dinner with her. I felt that there was something really special about her. The excitement I saw then became obvious when Val was chosen by Nancy Pelosi to serve on the first Impeachment panel. She was ready for big son did her a big favor by trying to take her on during a House session. She verbally destroyed him, and their argument was featured on MSNBC and CNN repeatedly for a couple of weeks.

Marco Rubio is a lousy Senator. He reminds me of a dandelion, blowing in the wind until he turns to dust and votes the way we knew he would vote all along. Marco does a great job of making it seem as though he cares, but one soon finds out that he cares only for "Little Marco." What a great replacement for Rubio Val will be.

Then there is Charlie Crist. I admit to being surprised that he is willing to give up a relatively safe House seat in DC to run for Governor against a Republican who is, sadly, exceedingly popular here in Florida. Charlie is a great politician and an outstanding Administrator. We need those administrative skills in Tallahassee. As a Republican Governor he was willing to put his job on the line to support President Obama. We need him in Tallahassee.

Since Charlie is leaving his House seat behind, several local candidates have thrown their hats into the ring. Ben Diamond and Eric Lynn are running for Charlie's seat.

THOUGHTS ON D-DAY 2020

Opinion by the Editorial Board –The Washington Post
June 5, 2020 at 2:03 p.m. EDT

THIS DAY used to be commemorated regularly on newspaper editorial pages: the day when Allied forces invaded Europe and began the long, bloody march to Germany. In time, the custom faded, but still the papers would receive letters to the editor every year complaining about the absence of a tribute on June 6, letters mostly from the dwindling number of people who remembered that day all too well.

Today, it's worth reviving the custom, if only because of the lesson it contains about leadership and its obligations — a lesson that seems to have been largely forgotten by many of our leaders. In June 1944, Dwight D. Eisenhower, the supreme Allied commander, faced a harrowing choice about whether to proceed with the invasion of Normandy. The weather was terrible, the prospect of huge casualties all too real. But to delay any longer would be disastrous, Eisenhower believed. He made the decision to go ahead.

"During the somber lull between the decision and the invasion, Ike scribbled a quick note and stuffed it in his wallet, as was his custom before every major operation," writes Tim Rives, deputy director of the Eisenhower presidential library. Chances are you have read it before, but it's worth another look; it has special meaning this D-Day. Eisenhower intended it to be made public in the event the invasion was repelled. It read simply:

"Our landings in the Cherbourg-Havre area have failed to gain a satisfactory foothold and I have withdrawn the troops. My decision to attack at this time and place was based upon the best information available. The troops, the air and the Navy did all that Bravery and devotion to duty could do. If any blame or fault attaches to the attempt it is mine alone."

"Ike disdained pomposity in word and manner," writes Mr. Rives. "He disliked the 'slick talker' and the 'desk pounder.' The histrionic gesture or declamation just wasn't in him." But in the last sentence of a hastily written note 76 years ago, the future president said all that needed to be said about the essence of leadership and the locus of responsibility, in words that are not heard often today, and never from our president when fault or blame is to be assigned. (Ed note: this was written last year; thankfully President Biden doesn't blame others for his decisions.)

since he was Special Council to Alex Sink when she was Florida's Chief Financial Officer. He is currently State House Representative for District 68 (St Petersburg.) He has been a popular House member and was slated to become minority leader. Ben has a way of quietly making his point without anger. That ability is needed.

Eric Lynn has been running for the US House seat since Charlie Crist announced for Governor. He was a congressional aide and became a National Security Advisor to the Obama Campaign in 2009. After Obama won, Eric became an advisor to the Secretary of Defense, Robert Gates. You have heard from Eric at Club meetings.

Many people were surprised when St Petersburg's popular Mayor, Rick Kriseman, formally announced that he would not run for the House seat. He is termed out as Mayor, and there have been no further announcements. We will see.

Ben Diamond's announcement left open the District 68 State House seat and Lindsey Cross announced that she would run for that seat. Lindsey is an Environmental Scientist (Imagine a Scientist in Tallahassee!)

who ran previously against Jeff Brandes for the Florida Senate. Lindsey had a lot going against her in that race. She stepped in late after the initial candidate dropped out. Lindsey had little time for fund-raising or to make herself known against a well-known opponent. This time she is the first in the race and the seat is open.

So, as of this writing, that is where we are here in Pinellas County as far as upcoming candidates are concerned. If you want to make a difference in the political mess the Republicans have created, now may be the time to join one of these candidates' Campaign. Help a candidate win and knock out a Republican.

And yes, this really is a serious mess that Republicans have wrought. Back when the Former Guy was nominated, there was talk of damage to our democracy. How could a moron like him damage our Democracy? It had been around for more than 200 years after all and had survived the Civil War. What could be worse than that? Now we know. He really is a moron, but powers within the party had been waiting for a President like him. One they could maneuver with flattery. They had worked for years, dumbing down the Republican electorate, making less educated Americans afraid of people whose skin was a different color or who came from a different country. The white men in power worked to keep women out and set a different standard for them. They got their true believers into State Houses and School Boards. This is their opportunity to take over and destroy our Democracy and mortally wound this country.

Well, the fact is that now is our time to step up, challenge them with the truth, and stop them cold by rescuing this 200-year-old Democracy. It starts here with Democrats winning all over the country, each displacing a dangerous Republican.

JUNE SPEAKERS:

Congressman Charlie Crist, CD 13. Candidate for Governor of Florida in 2022 and

Eric Lynn, Candidate for CD 13

Bay News 9—May 4, 2020

By Mitch Perry

The St. Petersburg-based Democratic Congressman gave a speech shortly before noon [on May 4] in front of supporters in South St. Pete, where he lambasted Gov. Ron DeSantis and the GOP-controlled Florida Legislature.

“This is a governor who doesn’t listen, doesn’t care, and doesn’t think about you- unless you can write a campaign check,” he said. “He sees our state’s wonderful diversity as a threat, not a strength we all celebrate.”

The 64-year-old Crist (he’ll be 65 in July) has already served as governor of Florida – when he was a Republican (2007-2011), sandwiched between the Jeb Bush and Rick Scott eras. Crist narrowly lost to Scott when he ran as a Democrat in 2014.

The former Republican is running on a progressive agenda. He said in his speech that he supports legalizing recreational marijuana, raising the minimum wage to $15 an hour and banning assault weapons.

And he said he would name a Chief Climate Change Officer to tackle what he calls the “existential threat” that a heating planet means to Florida’s future.

Crist supporters say his brand of moderate politics can play well in such a time of tumult.

“This has been a really divisive few years, for Florida and for our country and it’s really important that we get beyond this and focus on the issues for the people of Florida and I don’t know anyone better than Charlie Crist whose been able to do that,” said longtime Crist supporter Susan McGrath after his speech.

Crist is one of several Democrats who will enter the primary for 2022. Agriculture Commissioner Nikki Fried made it pretty clear after today’s Cabinet meeting that she will soon be filing to run, saying as the top-elected Democrat in Florida, “it makes absolute sense for me to be running for governor,” adding that such an announcement would not take place today.

The jockeying for who will succeed Crist in Florida’s 13th Congressional District began did on Monday, when the GOP nominee in 2020, 31-year-old Air Force Veteran Anna Paulina Luna, became the first name Republican to enter the race.

When it comes to Democrats, the most frequently invoked names by politicians to get into the race is St. Petersburg-based state Rep. Ben Diamond and former Obama administration official Eric Lynn. St. Petersburg Mayor Rick Kriseman has declined to run for this seat.

SPOTLIGHT ON: Robert (Bob) Glass

Comments from our club president.....

When I became President of the Largo Club, I was only one person with a lot of balls in the air. It was initially overwhelming. Several Board Members offered their help and experience, including Bob Glass. Bob is one person I can always depend on for help or for a rational assessment of whatever I am trying to do. Bob never makes a big deal of what he does, he does it quietly and very efficiently. He tracks membership and is the person always in the back of the room, greeting people and being helpful. He makes calls every month to newly registered voters, inviting them to a Club meeting. We would not have had years of successful picnics without Bob. He takes care of getting the venue and resolves any problems with the City of Largo. He buys the food and supplies, and (with the help of his wife, Delores,) gets things set up. If we are short a cook, he volunteers. If we run out of something, he goes to the store. I am very fortunate to have Board Members who work hard to make the Club successful. However, whenever I need something done, Bob is the first person I think of. I am most grateful for his help and support.

thank you to Delores and Bob for the following.....

Bob and his family moved to Seminole Florida in 1988. He always held an interest in politics and joined the PCDEC in 2004. He quickly got immersed in the KERRY Campaign for president. He organized Meet and Greet meetings through the MoveOn organization and participated in various roles at the Pinellas Park Kerry field office. That year he attended the State Delegate Meeting and had the chance to meet with candidate Kerry.

He continued his involvement in the PCDEC as a precinct captain working on local campaigns. He soon realized that being involved with candidate campaigns was the thing he liked doing. In time he met Janet Long and maintained a close friendship with her which continues today. During that time, he worked on her numerous campaigns, doing phone banking, canvassing, installing signs and working with other volunteers.

Bob got interested in the Jim Davis' 2006 campaign for Governor and was excited to meet one on one with him in Tampa. Although they failed to get Jim Davis elected it was another learning experience.

He also realized that there were other important issues facing the party that could make a difference in winning elections. That would be registering new voters, getting out the vote and gathering signatures on petitions to secure democratic candidates on the ballot. Bob became active in all of these activities.

About 2008 Bob joined the Obama campaign and later joined the Largo Mid-Pinellas Democratic Club and eventually became a board member. He has maintained an active role in the Club ever since. In 2012 President Obama visited the City of Seminole and Bob was a volunteer at the SPC Seminole campus site where Obama was to speak. He spent the night with many other volunteers erecting stands and stages in preparation for the President's visit. Later that day he had the opportunity to speak with Sen Bill Nelson and Charlie Crist.

In 2009 he accepted the opportunity to work in Patricia Plantamura's Seminole City Council campaign. Everyone worked on an aggressive campaign and she, against all odds, won her seat. She was the only Democrat out of an eight-member board.

In 2010 Bob got involved in the Alex Sink gubernatorial campaign and worked almost every day in her Seminole office. At a rally in Feather Sound Bob had a chance to have a conversation with MD Rep. Steny Hoyer. During that time, he joined a group of activists called Seminole Goes Green, promoting environmental sustainability by recycling. The group participated in the annual Seminole Pow Wow parade with a float of the old Seminole water tower.

He also played an active role in the Mary Lou Ambrose, Lorena Grizzle, and Alex Herren D66 campaigns.

He was asked to become the treasurer of Jack Killingsworth's SOE campaign effort in 2012 and worked with Jack on a second campaign a few years later.

In 2016 he was elected District 66 Chair. Prior to that he served as vice chair of district 51 (which later became D66). Dennis Port was the district chair and Bob felt that he learned a lot of valuable lessons from him.

Currently Bob continues to enjoy being active in the LMPDC and playing an active role in Democratic campaigns. 🍷

Abraham Lincoln issued the Emancipation Proclamation on January 1 1863. This news was not given to enslaved people in Texas until June 19 1865 because slave owners wanted to complete the harvest and feared if the enslaved people were informed of this they would stop working. Along with the fact that the Union Army was responsible for enforcing the Proclamation and until they occupied the territory Slave owners would not tell slaves they were free or would not release them until forced to do so.

Consequently, it became known as Juneteenth a combination of June and 19th. It was then that General Gordon Granger delivered the message in Galveston Texas that the war was finally over. Part of the message including the statement “This involves an absolute equality of rights and rights of property between former master and slaves”. Enslaved black people now found a reason to celebrate.

Juneteenth is a way for African Americans to celebrate what our ancestors endured and reflect on the beginning of a journey to equality which is still not complete. It is an integral part of American history to be appreciated by all American Citizens as it portrays the struggle of a nation striving for perfection for all its citizens who have played a vital role in making The United States of America great.

A Time for Change at the Florida Democratic Party

By Rick Boylan
State Committeeman
Pinellas County Democratic Party

This is a very exciting time for the Florida Democratic Party! In May, the State Executive Committee voted by a two-thirds majority to approve a new voting structure to eliminate the weighted vote.

Under the new voting structure state committee members (instead of votes) will be apportioned to the state's 67 counties. In addition, the FDP will become a national model for diversity and inclusion. County parties will now work with the FDP to assess the demographics of their Democratic voters and to create programs with specific goals to reach out to our historically underrepresented constituencies. Ultimately, this will help to make our governing bodies at the county and state levels more inclusive and representative of our Democratic voters.

Our state party's current voting structure was designed in the 1970s, when Florida had 8.5 million residents and 15 congressional districts. That structure allows multiple votes to be allocated to members depending on the county they represent. Members from small counties are allocated 1 to 3 votes; members from medium counties are allocated 4 to 14 votes; and members from large counties are allocated 25 to 59 votes. That means that while 90% of the state committee's membership is from Florida's 60 small and medium counties, those members cast less than half of the votes (46%) on the state committee. Conversely, the 14 members from the seven large counties representing 10% of the state committee's membership cast 54% of the votes.

Under the approved changes to the FDP Bylaws, work on the new diversity outreach and inclusion programs by the FDP and county parties should begin right away. This change will have an enormous effect on the composition of our state committee membership.

Although our state has grown tremendously since the 1970s -- with today's population at 21.6 million and now with 28 congressional districts -- the FDP voting structure has failed to evolve. Despite multiple efforts and several special committees, proposals to change the voting structure all failed to achieve the required 2/3 vote needed. Until the vote in May, those members holding a lot of weighted votes kept the Party from changing the system.

As one of the seven large counties, Pinellas County has long been at the forefront of advocating for changing the state party's voting structure. Our two state committee members have often noted the unfairness of our large county having only two members to speak and vote on behalf of our county's diverse and distinct Democratic constituencies.

Fortunately, over the recent organizational cycles, support for eliminating the weighted vote has grown. More state committee members now understand the fundamental unfairness of some members having more votes than others and limiting opportunities for participation.

Also, in August 2019, the Rules Committee of the Democratic National Committee told Florida that the use of weighted votes is not provided for in any of the Party's rules and "the concept of weighted votes is contrary to the Democratic Party's and Robert's Rules fundamental principle of ‘one person, one vote.’” They gave the FDP until August 2020 to change the State Party’s voting mechanism or face the possible removal of its DNC members. Sadly, the FDP leadership at the time did nothing. As a result, a challenge has been filed against the state’s DNC members based on the fact they were elected using weighted votes and that issue is pending before the DNC’s Credentials Committee.

The push to move away from the use of weighted votes was a prominent issue among candidates running for State Party Chair at the January 2021 organizational election. In his December 17, 2020, campaign email “One Party, One Future,” Manny Diaz stated his commitment to working “to find a new vote structure that better reflects a more inclusive process on how we conduct our business.” He also promised to expand opportunities to make sure “underrepresented communities inside and outside the party [will] have a seat at the table.”

Following his election, State Chair Diaz appointed a Rules Committee and charged the members with the task of developing a plan to replace the current weighted vote structure and to bring the proposal to the state committee for a vote within his first 100 days.

Through a series of meetings, the FDP Rules Committee ultimately approved a proposal to replace the weighted vote system with a one vote per member system. The committee determined that a total of 400 members should be apportioned among the 67 counties -- an increase of 266 members over the 134 members already allocated based on each county having two members. Members will be allocated to the counties based on each county’s Democratic registration and election performance. Based on that, the 400 members are to be apportioned to the counties using the Method of Equal Proportions -- the same method the US Congress and the Democratic National Committee use to apportion their members. Based on the current calculations, Pinellas County will have 18 members.

However, there is one more hurdle to cross before the new changes can go into effect.

Under the approved changes to the FDP Bylaws, work on the new diversity outreach and inclusion programs by the FDP and county parties should begin right away. This change will have an enormous effect on the composition of our state committee membership. Right now, there are seven Hispanics elected from the counties to serve on the state committee. Under this new program, we could have a goal to elect 82 Hispanic members. Currently, we have 36 African American members from the counties. Under the new changes, our goal could be to elect 108 members.

Moving away from a limit of two members per county opens opportunities for all our Democratic constituencies to have better representation on the state committee.

The election of the new members will take place in the normal election cycle -- during the Party’s organization meetings following the presidential election. Waiting until December 2024 will give county parties time to revise their bylaws and institute new and expanded outreach programs. At the same time, it gives the state committee time to make fine-tuning adjustments to the Charter and Bylaws to address issues that might arise as implementation is underway.

However, there is one more hurdle to cross before the new changes can go into effect. During the virtual State Executive Committee meeting in May, the FDP used an online system for voting. Apparently, Ken Evans, the State Committeeman from Broward County cast his 59 votes against the change, but his votes failed to record in the system. According to the vendor, it appears to be a matter of user error because Mr. Evans had opened multiple voting tabs, contrary to repeated instructions by staff during the meeting. Including Mr. Evans' weighted votes in the total will kill the amendment and keep the status quo. State Chair Diaz said he cannot change the announced vote but has invited Mr. Evans to file an appeal with the FDP's Judicial Council to have that body review the facts and determine the outcome -- including possibly holding re-vote by the State Executive Committee.

Thus, while 93 state committee members cast 695 votes (68.34%) in support of this long-needed change to the state committee's voting structure, and 46 members cast 322 votes (31.66%) against the change, this matter has yet to be finally

The Pinellas Democratic Party stood in solidarity with the leadership of the Florida Democratic Party in their efforts to reform the antiquated weighted vote system.

Today the reform proposal, authored by Rick Boylan and eloquently championed by Kyandra Darling, passed with 68.3% of the vote.

We will have three years to build a bigger and more diverse party capable of filling 18 state committee seats. Each new state committee member will have one vote.

With this good news, we must recommit to our efforts to be intentional in building the most diverse, inclusive and effective party in Florida. It won't be easy, few worthy endeavors are, but, as the old adage goes, we can do hard things!

Let's get started!

He is omitting the fact that the bonuses were only made possible by the $10.2 billion sent to Florida from the American Rescue Plan (ARP)--the plan that Democrats passed without one single Republican vote!

It is past time that we all send letters-to-the-editors of our local newspapers to remind bonus recipients and the public that it is President Biden and Democrats in Congress we should thank, not the Governor. After all, it was DeSantis who told reporters on March 8, 2021 (WCJB, Tallahassee) that the ARP was designed to "basically bail out the poorly governed states." Yet he accepted the money and now turns around and takes credit for helping those who stood strong during the pandemic. It is so typical of his deceptive and non-transparent style of governing. Don't let him get away with it.

Thank you,

Jean Siebenaler, DWCF Legislative Chair

Why are we not meeting in person you ask, well, why rush it?

I know it feels like we should, but if you just wait, it will be worth it. We will come back in September with a bang. We will be celebrating with a Reunion at the Dunedin Country Club on September 29, 2021. Then in October, we'll resume meeting at the Clearwater East Library.

I am asking you all to put Sept 29th on your calendar and join us for a wonderful reunion celebration. Yes, we made it through the pandemic and we deserve to celebrate that fact!

Now I know that this past year has been frustrating with not being able to meet in person--no live rallies, no sign-waving and no live Tally Days. Well, get off the couch and start exercising because we need to be ready for next year. Next year could be the most important election year since 2016 and the one most important thing is getting rid of Ron DeSantis. It may seem unimaginable but there could be a Trump – DeSantis ticket in the near future.

So everyone start helping our organization now by working on getting Democrats elected, especially women, inviting friends to join our club so that we can reach that 100-member mark I'm hoping for.

Lastly, I want to remind you that this is an election year for the DWCF and that means for our club also. Please give it some thought. We need you to think about running for an office. We will need a new President, First Vice-President and Treasurer. Being a Board member will bring pride to you and new faces and energy to our leadership.

Lincoln's martyrdom enshrined his greatness in our collective memory. Less discussed is the epic tragedy caused by the loss of his singular wisdom, goodness, pragmatism and deft political hand at shaping the post-Civil War world. The years that followed the Civil War are key to understanding who we are as a nation and facing the great national myth that at long last demands a full reckoning. The American Civil War was the first industrialized war in history. It killed 2.5 percent of the population and if it was fought today, adjusted for population. It would have killed 7 million people. The war wasn't just inevitable; it was predestined by the presence of the evil of human slavery on American soil. The war was just, necessary, brutal, tragic and unfinished. The idea of a separate slave nation in the Northern Hemisphere was forever ended but the culture that held the ambition to create one was not defeated. With peace, a traumatized nation moved forward and tried to heal. It was this desire that fueled the great lie in our American story.

The great lie was that there was honor and virtue in the Southern cause and that the war was about things other than slavery. It was entirely about slavery. The eight times wounded, fighting professor from Maine who spoke seven languages, Joshua Lawrence Chamberlin, was given the honor of accepting the Confederate surrender. He called the Union Army to attention as the vanquished Confederate soldiers lay down their battle flags and went home. Honor was a very different societal concept in 1865. The South lost the war but the victors allowed the fiction to root that the evil cause could accommodate Honor and Virtue within it.

The Confederate Army went home, defeated, but carrying the racial malice of the Confederacy in their hearts. There were two racial massacres in 1866. One was in Memphis and the other in New Orleans. The Memphis massacre began when white cops and Confederate veterans attacked freed slaves and Black Union Army veterans. The New Orleans massacre similarly was an attack by a white mob of Confederate soldiers against peaceful black citizens and Union Army veterans. These attacks were instrumental in helping pass Civil Rights legislation in 1866, the 14th Amendment and the election of the self-styled Radical Republicans who put the South under military occupation and sought to break the culture of the defeated slave nation. Reconstruction ended in 1877 with corrupt political horse trading.

Jim Crow followed and another 85 plus years of full on racial terror and injustice until the Jim Crow South fell. The truth is that the South needed another generation of occupation. The defeated South built their new Confederacy on the shattered dreams and hopes of freed slaves who saw slavery give way to a new tyranny. There are no virtues to celebrate in the life of Robert Lee of Virginia. He was a traitor and a cruel slave master. The Confederacy was an evil cause that blights us still. Whitewashed history weakens the nation. This argument about the past is important because the main point is that the same people who are fighting to restrict liberty, freedom and dignity for people on the basis of skin color today are the same people who venerate an evil cause with nostalgic delusions about its nobility. Freedom means freedom for everyone. The Tulsa Massacre of 1921 and other white attacks should be used in gauging the intent behind the building of Confederate Memorials of that era. Most of the debates taking place around these monuments leave out the important context of their construction.

They weren't built as symbols of remembrance to the awful price of war. They were mostly built in the 1920's as symbols of white supremacy. They were markers of oppression and lighthouses in the night to remind Black Americans about their subjugation. The 100 plus years of racial terror that followed a war fought over slavery deserve a couple chapters in American History Class. We have nothing to fear by facing injustice. It is necessary and overdue. It will help us become what an embrace of our highest ideals tell us we can become. 🙏

Humanity is More Important Than Bipartisanship

MAY 25, 2021 By John Pavlovitz

For months I've been hearing about pursuing a bipartisan America; about this nation needing to forge a new spirit of political collaboration if we ever hope to bridge the massive divides here.

I'm tired of hearing that.

We all know how we got here.

- * We've all lived through the past five years.
- * We saw the "both sides" rhetoric in Charlottesville.
- * We saw the George Floyd murder.
- * We saw the violence against the BLM protests.
- * We saw the support for Kyle Rittenhouse.
- * We saw the conspiratorial pandemic denials.
- * We saw the anti-mask defiance.
- * We saw the legislative attacks during the election.
- * We saw the terrorism at the Capitol.
- * We saw the lack of response by the Government.

We can't apologize for seeing it and we can't be gaslit into thinking that we didn't see it and we can't be guilted into forgetting that we saw it.

The divides here in this country are not arbitrary and they are not meritless.

They exist for a reason.

They are here because some of us simply refuse to tolerate racism and sedition and the systematic extermination of diversity here, and we need to remember that.

This is not blind tribalism, this is our shared decency rejecting something so very indecent.

We need to stop talking about bipartisanship in America and start talking about humanity before it's too late.

The idea of bipartisanship suggests that there are two very different but equally valid sides represented at a given moment. This is inaccurate in this version of America.

Knowingly perpetuating a dangerous lie of election fraud, is not a valid side.

Fighting a thorough, objective examination of the deadly attack on Congress intended to overturn an election, is not a valid side.

Legislatively cancelling the votes of people of color is not a valid side.

Justifying the murder of unarmed people of color by law enforcement, is not a valid side.

Voting unanimously against COVID aid while opposing masks and vaccines in the wake of 500,000 deaths, is not a valid side.

Taking away the rights of women to have autonomy over their own bodies, is not a valid side.

Demanding that teachers no longer teach about racism in America, is not a valid side.

Elevating such positions by implying that they deserve an equal seat at the table is simply reckless. To claim a desire to work with the violent lunacy of Marjorie Taylor Greene or the nonsensical, ignorant gun lust of Lauren Boebert or the unabashed sedition of Josh Hawley or the blind obstructionism of Mitch McConnell—is at best disingenuous and at worst, moral complicity. Throughout our history there have been moments when unequivocal stands against an existential threat need to be made. That's where America is right now.

For months, Democrats have been begging Republicans for a bipartisan investigation of the January 6th terrorist attack on the Capitol, and they have steadfastly refused. This is because the attack itself was partisan. That was the whole point: to overthrow democracy and deny the voice of the majority and silence an entire group of Americans.

Since the moment the halls of Congress were breached, Republicans have laughably declared the real culprits to be BLM, ANTI-FA, and the "Radical Left." If they really believed this to be true, they'd be loudly demanding an investigation right now—but they are refusing it.

The only reason for a political party to resist documenting information about the Capitol attack, is because they planned, supported, participated in, and stood to benefit from it—period. Had the coup attempt been successful and the last guy was still president and Republicans now had the majority in Congress, do you really think they'd be talking about bipartisanship? Of course not.

There are no false equivalencies to be made here at this place and time in the history of this nation. This abomination of a political party is now nothing more than a death cult whose sole platform is appeasing, pleasing, and defending a wannabe despot. To elevate them to something worthy of partnership is political treason and theological heresy.

To entertain conspiracy or abide terrorism or enable bigotry in the name of some ceremonial both sides-ism makes a mockery of the costly battles so many vulnerable communities have fought before us, in order to make this a place where blind nationalism does not rule the day and where a minority of extremists cannot have their way.

I don't care about bipartisan-ship, I care about protecting humanity.

If the fight for that humanity places me on one side of a partisan political line, that likely points to the inhumanity on the other side of it. 🍷

Republicans gerrymander too

I completely agree with Eric Zorn "Why 'fair' maps aren't fair" (May 19). Until there is a nationwide plan to end gerrymandering that every state has to abide by at the same time, Illinois' Democrats would be foolish to give up their advantage in drawing our new voting districts.

Yes, Illinois' Democrats control the Illinois House, the state Senate, the Governor's Mansion and 13 of Illinois' 18 congressional seats. But as Eric points out, 57% of Illinois' voters voted Democratic in 2020.

Compare that to Republican-controlled Florida.

Republicans have controlled the Florida House since 1997 and they currently hold a 78-42 seat advantage.

Republicans have controlled the Florida state Senate since 1994 where they currently hold a 24-16 seat advantage.

Every governor of Florida since 1999 has been a Republican.

And Republicans hold 16 of Florida's 27 congressional seats.

But the hard part to figure out is how Florida's Republicans manage those advantages when the Florida Department of State/Division of Elections state as of March 31, 2021, there are 109,264 more active registered Democratic voters in Florida than there are active registered Republican voters in Florida. How does that happen?

Republican super-gerrymandering. So save your Sunday school lecture on using computer algorithms to redistrict fairly. Either the same system is implemented in every state at the same time or "I'll do it, after you do it."
